

Information, Please

When I was quite young, my father had one of the first telephones in our neighborhood.. I remember the polished old case fastened to the wall. The shiny receiver hung on the side off the box. I was too little to reach the telephone, but I used to listen when fascinated when my mother talked to it.

Then I discovered that somewhere inside the wonderful device lived an amazing person. Her name was "Information Please", and there was nothing she didn't know. Information Please could supply anyone's number and the correct time.

I walked around the house sucking my throbbing finger, finally arriving at the stairway. The telephone! Quickly, I ran for the footstool in the parlor and dragged it to the landing. Climbing up, I unhooked the receiver in the parlor and held it to my ear. "Information Please" I said into the mouthpiece just above my head. A click or two and a small, clear voice spoke into my ear.

"Information."

"I hurt my finger..." I wailed into the phone, the tears came readily enough now that I had an audience.

"Isn't your mother home?" came the question.

"Nobody's home but me," I blubbered.

"Are you bleeding?" the voice asked.

"No," I replied. "I hit my finger with a hammer and it hurts."

"Can you open the icebox?" she asked.

I said I could.

"Then chip off a little bit of ice and hold it to your finger," said the voice.

After that I called "Information Please" for everything. I asked her for help with my geography, and she told me where Philadelphia was. She helped me with my math. She told me my pet chipmunk, that I caught in the park just the day before, would eat fruit and nuts.

Then, there was the time Petey, our pet canary, died. I called "Information Please," and I told her the sad story. She listened, and then said things grownups say to soothe a child. But I was not consoled. I asked her, "Why is it that birds should sing so beautifully and bring joy to all families, only to end up as a heap of feathers on the bottom of a cage?"

She must have sensed my concern, For she said quietly, "Wayne, always remember there are other worlds to sing in."

Somehow, I felt better.

Another day I was on the telephone, "Information Please." "Information," said the now familiar voice. "How do I spell fix?" I asked.

All of this took place in a small town in the Pacific Northwest. When I was nine years old, we moved across the country to Boston. I missed my friend very much. "Information Please" belonged in that old wooden box back home, and I somehow never thought of trying the shiny new phone that sat on the table in the hall. As I grew into my teens, the memories of these childhood conversations never really left me.

Often, in moments of doubt and perplexity I would recall the serene sense of security I had then. I appreciated now how patient, understanding, and kind she was to have spent her time on a little boy.

A few years later on my way west to collage, my plane set down in Seattle. I had about a half hour or so between planes. I spent fifteen minutes or so on the phone with my sister, who lived there now. I dialed my hometown operator and said, "Information, Please," Miraculously, I heard the small, clear voice, I knew so well... "Information"

I hadn't planned this, But I heard myself say, "Could you please tell me how to spell fix?" There was a long pause. Then came soft-spoken answer, "I guess your finger must be healed by now."

"So it's really you," I said. "I wonder if you have any idea how much you meant to me during that time?" "I wonder if you know how much your call meant to me. I never had any children and I looked forward to your calls." I told her how often I had thought of her over the years and I asked her if I could call her again when I came back to visit my sister. "Please do," she said. "Just ask for Sally."

Three months later I was back in Seattle. A different voice answered, "information." I asked for Sally.

"Are you a friend?"

[next page, please]

"Yes, a very old friend," I answered.

"I'm sorry to have to tell you this," she said. "Sally has been working part-time for the last few years because she was sick. She died five weeks ago."

Before I could hang up she said,

"Wait a minute, did you say your name was Wayne?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Well, Sally left a message for you. She wrote it down in case you called. Let me read it to you."

The note said, "Tell him there are other worlds to sing in. He'll know what I mean."

I thanked her, and hung up. I knew what she meant.

Never underestimate the impression you may make on others.
