THE BIG BOOK (CLUB)

Chapter 1

It was May 1983. I was 24 and I had hit bottom about 3 years prior and was still sliding. Somehow I ended up in an AA meeting in St. Petersburg Florida. I don't remember much, but I do know that before I left that night I had been given a Big Book with instructions to read it. I was afraid I would drink so I launched into the book. I stumbled through the Roman numeral pages, some kind of medical opinion and on to a chapter by some guy named Bill. After a first reading I really could not understand who he was or what I was supposed to learn by reading his story. I was a 24 year old, unemployed, female in the 80's era of dance clubs, bright makeup and big hair. What could I possibly have in common with an old stockbroker from New England? Well, actually, everything! I've read Bill's Story many times throughout the years and learned that Bill, like me, when drinking had a propensity for grandiose ideas, and actions sure to bring applause and the oft chased balm to the ego. He always had one more idea (soldier, lawyer, broker); one more scheme (market analysis, moving to Canada, taking up golfing) and one more promise to quit. Like mine, his intentions to moderate or stop were sincere when uttered and like me he had family and friends who watched in concern then later in horror as alcohol took control and became more impossible to evade or ignore. And finally he became overwhelmed and was deep in loneliness, despair and self-pity. That state of hopelessness that crosses from 1935 to 1983, from male to female from New England to Florida. And when he was at the jumping off place, he had that moment of clarity, like me.

Amazingly, as I continued to read the book and follow the instructions (as Bill had), I too received the gift of sobriety. But that was just a starting point and it was time to really study the book. To try to understand how it was written and what it was telling me. I came to understand that the book was written to be mailed to drunks or anyone who, in 1939 had an inquiry regarding this new method of staying sober. Most drunks didn't have the luxury of living near Akron or New York and thus had no individual contact with the early pioneers of our society. Our book was sent to them and it included the medical opinion and exact instructions on how to become sober. But even more interesting is that Bill's Story was not a 'look at me' chapter but rather a 12th step call to the world. From Bill's first meeting with Ebby T. on page 9, through Bill and Lois' 12th step work on page 15, I am given a firsthand account of how the implementation of what would soon become our beloved 12 steps, brought sobriety to Bill when nothing else had worked. Bill was never one to mince words and he gave me strong instructions such as 'I must perfect and enlarge my spiritual life to survive', and I must turn in all things to the Father of light who presides over us all' and the 'absolute necessity of demonstrating these principles in all my affairs' and perhaps the most important 'faith has to work twenty-four hours a day in and through me or I shall perish'.

Bill W died in 1971, 12 years before I found AA, but thankfully his story and experience were waiting there for me.

This is the beginning of a month-by-month study of the Big Book of Alcoholics Anonymous. We're playing catch up in February. You'll find Chapter 2, There is a Solution, on page 3 of this issue. Please join us in reading a chapter a month. If you would like to write about one of the chapters, be sure to contact us first to ensure someone else hasn't already snapped up the chapter you'd like to write about. Send an email to lifeline@saltlakeaa.org.

THE BIG BOOK (CLUB)

CHAPTER 2

Chapter Two, "There Is A Solution", lays the groundwork for the trip through the Twelve Steps.

First off the Big Book uses this chapter to establish its own bona fides. The first one hundred pull no punches with us; they tell us flatly that they have recovered, and make it clear that they have a way out – singular – upon which they absolutely agree.

Explaining that they have learned that nobody can carry this message as effectively as a recovered alcoholic can, they admit the difficulty of trying to carry this message face-to-face to drunks fast enough to keep them from sliding into oblivion.

So they tell us that they published this volume in an attempt to carry the message to those that they cannot meet directly; thus this book is the message of Alcoholics Anonymous, and they promise that it will answer the reader's questions about the illness, how to recover, and "what do I have to do?"

Next, the book gives the description of the illness itself, establishing the proposition that the body of the alcoholic, if exposed to alcohol, reacts to the alcohol by demanding more. However, the text makes it plain that the "phenomenon of craving" is not the real problem, for – if it were – the alcoholic would simply not take the first drink. Instead, the problem centers in the mind, rather than the body – once the alcoholic knows that he cannot safely take that first drink, he does so anyway - and the book make the flat declaration that the mind will never be able to not take the first drink by remembering how bad the last drunk was.

It gives a great definition of powerlessness. The problem is will power, that being exactly the power that the alcoholic lacks, and is thus powerless. The will is the capacity to make a decision; will power is the ability to stick to a decision once it is made. The will – and, as synonyms, desire and choice – as tools to keep us away from the first drink forever have no effect. Self-knowledge is useless.

In this area of the text, the Big Book is doing the same thing that we are supposed to do when we individually carry the message face-to-face (following the directions in Chapter Seven) – first, it lays out the description and characteristics of alcoholism and the alcoholic, and thus leaves it up to the reader to purse his lips and nod his head – and thus be led indirectly into a suspicion, that he might, indeed, have this problem.

Lastly, the book again follows the Chapter Seven pattern by simply letting the reader know that, since the body and mind are helpless over alcohol, the only way to solve the problem is via the spirit. At this point, it does not tell the reader what this "spiritual awakening" is or how it is acquired, simply leaving that concept for the reader's mind to chew on while he moves forward into the mortar and pestle of Chapter Three, where the severity and hopelessness of the illness are drilled into the reader, to bring him to the point of desperation necessary to generate the willingness one needs to go through with our solution.

The book then tells the reader what is to come, promising – after the explanation of alcoholism and a chapter to the agnostic – to give clear-cut directions on how to recover. Following the practice of "tell 'em what you'll tell 'em, then tell 'em, then tell 'em what you told 'em", the Book lays the trap that is so expertly sprung in Chapter Five.

Happy Birthday!

It works — it really does!

The Chair in the Corner

FEBRUARY

Speaking of love.....I love being a part of something, “up in the middle” of something. For me, that’s a sign that the solution found in Alcoholics Anonymous is working. I’m not thinking of myself or my problems or my wants when I am involved in something. All of my attention is directed outward. Right now, I am sitting in Central Office and there are two people in the book room – sounds like a sponsee, sponsor conversation. In the front part of the office volunteers are waiting on customers. The Lifeline Chair is putting the final touches on the February Lifeline. In the meeting room, it sounds like there is a planning meeting for PRAASA 2015. All of this activity involves people that are focused outside of themselves and on others. There is relief from the disease of alcoholism here at Central Office, please in us.

On another note, you will find this issue of the Lifeline looks a little different. Our editor and contributors have switched things up a bit. The “Voice of the Volunteers” is evolving into “Serving the Fellowship”. This monthly topic will be experiences and updates from chairs of the standing committees that were established to work with District and Area standing committees. Because Central Office has an address and a phone number, we usually receive inquiries and requests for help for treatment, bridging the gap, speakers, etc. Another new Lifeline feature will be “The Big Book Club”. Each month an AA member will share their experience with a chapter in the Big Book. “Those Who Helped Us” will be a new feature exploring the lives of those nonalcoholics who helped us with their time, expertise, advice, money, etc. Finally, “My Story” pretty much speaks for itself! Read and enjoy!

Have a loving February,
 Christy

Report on the CPC Workshop Phase One

Our Central Office standing committee on Cooperation with the Professional Community (CPC) facilitated "CPC Workshop -- Phase One" on January 18th. Participants included CO Board Chair Christy R, Area 69 CPC Chair Rachael F, District 11 CPC Chair Kent B and PI Chair Rich R, CO Outreach Chair Charlie T, Salt Lake Group CPC representative Steven R, District II member Annette S, CO Volunteer Chair Susan L and CO CPC Chair Jeff M. The workshop succeeded in achieving several important goals including learning the role and mission of CPC to support the wide variety of professionals in our community who work with alcoholics both in and out of recovery; clarifying the roles of Area, District, and our CO CPC committees; exploring AA's deep and extensive literature and other resources for CPC work; and networking with each other to provide more effective services.

Rachael F thoroughly covered our basic pamphlet, "How AA Members Cooperate with Professionals" (P-29), reviewed other resources including the "AA Guidelines on CPC" from GSO (MG-11), and provided specific sample packets of pamphlets for healthcare professionals and clergy along with sample letters. She also provided direction and encouragement in approaching professionals in the community, and in improving collaboration between Area, Districts, and CO. Christy R explained the role of our Central Office and standing committees since we are "on the frontlines" in responding to requests for assistance and information. Charlie T led a discussion of how we apply our Traditions in service, and the need for communication and involvement with our groups. Jeff M discussed our spiritual cornerstones including the origins of the Serenity Prayer, and reviewed a number of other pamphlets including "AA's Legacy of Service" (P-44) and "A Member's Eye View of Alcoholics Anonymous" (P-41). Everyone participated, openly sharing their experience, strength, and hope – as well as questions and concerns. We plan on a Phase Two CPC Workshop in late spring thanks to the commitment and needs expressed on the 18th.

The Non-Alcoholics Who Helped Us

Carl Gustav Jung was born in Kesswil, Switzerland in 1875. His interests in medicine and spirituality led him to study psychiatry. He became friends with, and worked with Sigmund Freud; during this period he became interested in the unconscious mind. Jung wanted to further understanding of the human mind through dreams, myth, art and philosophy. Gradually as Jung developed his ideas, he diverged from and separated his studies from Freud.

Jung believed the human psyche exists in three parts: the ego (the conscious mind), the personal unconscious and the collective unconscious. Jung believed the collective unconscious contained all of the experience and knowledge of mankind. The concept of synchronicity was originated by Jung. It is the experience of two or more events that are meaningfully related, where they are unlikely to be causally related. That is, just as events may be related by causality, they may also be connected by meaning, and may not have an explanation in terms of cause and effect.

Jung felt that the principle of synchronicity gave evidence for his concepts of archetypes and the collective unconscious. He thought synchronicity was descriptive of a governing dynamic that underlies the whole of human experience and history – social, emotional, psychological and spiritual. One of Jung's favorite quotes on synchronicity was from 'Through the Looking Glass' by Lewis Carroll, in which the White Queen says to Alice: "It's a poor sort of memory that only works backwards."

In my own experience these ideas have been fascinating to me. Once in a while I think of someone and then they call or appear or I run into them soon afterwards. These ideas have always filled me with wonder. Carl Jung endured the criticism of his peers in order to explore the mysteries of a deeper meaning in human life.

My Story

Editor's Note:

Below is the introduction to Frankie M's book "My Name is Frankie" He is a local member of AA. The book may be purchased at Genesis Bookstore in Salt Lake City.

This work is dedicated to God. When I asked for help, He sent an angel who gave me just enough money, and not a cent more, for a bus ticket to the VOA, where my decision to turn my back on alcohol once and for all was made.

After failing rehab five previous times, I knew this was the end of the line—it was my last hope. I had lived for forty-seven years as a miserable drunk, and for some reason I may never understand, God hadn't chosen to let me die. I know deeply and personally that angels attended me through my darkest moments, and I know of a certainty that God does exist, both to comfort me and bear my burdens.

If I did not use the time I have left to warn others, to spread my message to the world and try to save others from their own demons, I would betray this Higher Power I have come to know and love. I would also be turning my back on the core values of my recovery program, along with the people who have given me courage, support, and the life skills I needed to become someone with self-respect.

The words on my six-year chip read: "To thy own self be true." With apologies to Shakespeare, whom until now I had no idea was the author of those words, my story is filled with truths—truths that confess my betrayal of loved ones, friends—and most of all, myself.

To my family, who might be learning things about me for the first time, I offer a heart filled with sorrow and regret. I cheated my children out of time I should have given them. I cheated on my wife, who was my first love and the best mother in the world, because I was selfish. I take full responsibility for all my actions, those I remember and those I don't. I had blackouts, and I realize that during those times, I might have hurt a loved one or even a stranger who happened along. I was a walking landmine, not knowing or caring what I did, but now I care, very deeply, and it's time to make things right.

I will not blame anyone or anything on my childhood. To do so would cast a shadow over my angel mother. Simply put, my father, an immigrant from Italy, was schooled in the old ways of doing things. I was the firstborn son, and where much is given, much is required. I tried, but felt I failed at every turn. Still, he was "the papa!" He remains to this day, "the papa," and I love him. Today I live my life hour by hour, day by day, not knowing what the future might hold, but ready to trust God's mercy in whatever comes my way.

Right now, I'm only certain of two things. First—compared to what I used to have, I am a very poor man. Second—because of the things I have been through in my life, I am a very rich man. I have learned lessons I could not have learned in any other way. I know that I am always just one sip away from going straight back to the hell I was in before, but now I know the steps to sobriety. I know how to evaluate myself on a daily basis and how to attend my recovery meetings. And if the time ever comes when I slide backwards, I know that God will give me even more stumbling blocks I can use to climb higher, because He is in no way through teaching me.

I pray at the beginning of each day to let "His will be my will." I pray to Him at the end of the day and thank Him for everything He has given me. He is the Master Teacher, I am His student, and I will keep learning from Him.

My story isn't pretty, but it's a story of repentance and restitution. Most of all, it is a story of hope. Every one of God's children can avail themselves of His love and tender mercies if we make Him an offering of our desire to change. If you are or have been a drinker, you'll identify with many of the things I've endured, and hopefully, you'll also identify with my desire to change and gain the knowledge that you can. If I can do it, after forty-seven years of deep addiction, so can you.

Frankie M

Step Two

Came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves would restore us to sanity

I have heard people say in meetings that time doesn't matter and if you woke up before me you have more sobriety than I do. I do not believe this statement to be true. Time does matter and step two, for me, is a perfect example of that.

See, there was no way when I first "worked" the steps that I could believe that a higher power could help me let alone admit I was insane. I just was not ready for it. Lucky for me, I had a sponsor who did not dwell on this fact, and we just proceeded to work the rest of the steps. It was only by working the other steps that I could truly get the point that I believed that there was a higher power that could help me. I cannot pinpoint any one specific event or thing I did that caused this change; it just happened slowly over time.

The insanity part, lucky for me, was much easier than coming to believe in a higher power. See, life is life, and for me life can just get insane sometimes. Whether it is a self-imposed crisis, which most of them are, or just one of life's little events, the alcoholic insanity is alive and well in me and it will appear every once in a while.

At first the insanity was not easy to see and going to a higher power to solve the insanity was never my first choice. I would usually fight until I had no other choice but to go to a higher power. This was usually done at the suggestion of my sponsor. The funny thing was it has worked every time. A higher power has always been able to restore my sanity.

Since I started with an AA cliché I am going to end with one. Stick around till the miracle happens. For me this is the miracle of AA. I now have both the belief and faith in a higher power whom can not only restore my sanity, but can also help me with all of my problems.

Jerry T

Tradition Two

For our group purpose there is but one ultimate authority—a loving God as He may express Himself in our group conscience. Our leaders are but trusted servants; they do not govern.

One Member's View on Tradition 2

Tradition two reads: "For our group purpose there is but one ultimate authority—a loving God as He may express Himself in our group conscience. Our leaders are but trusted servants; they do not govern."

I, for one, am grateful that this tradition exists. I believe the spiritual intent behind this tradition is one of equality and humble servitude to this life-sustaining fellowship. It is a reminder that we are to trust the collective conscience of our members when it comes to matters concerning the business of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Predicated on the 1st Tradition, which drives home the importance of Unity within the AA group, it's our 5th tradition that defines our purpose as carrying the message of recovery to the still suffering alcoholic. While each group can be comprised of many members, there is still only one "ultimate authority" within the group—a loving God as expressed through our collective group conscience. By taking group matters to a vote, each member votes according to his/her own conscience, and the collective outcome carries. With no hierarchy in place, this democratic process ensures equal representation by all its members.

By utilizing AA's "spirit of rotation," those who are of service to the group (be it the secretary, treasurer or chairperson) will rotate out at the end of their term, thus limiting the "authority" that any one member has. Knowing that our leaders are but trusted servants who do not govern or hold any real authority, allows us to operate as a democratically run Group of Drunks.

Old Business

Elections for Board Positions and Chair for the Cooperation with Treatment Facilities Committee.

Board Secretary. Meg G. was duly elected to the office of Board Secretary for a two year term. Meg G. will resign her office as Board Trustee having served one year. The remainder of Meg's term (one year) will be filled in accordance with the terms of the Central Office By-Laws.

Board Trustee. Doug C. was duly elected to the office of Board Trustee for a two year term.

Board Alternate Trustee. Ray J. was duly elected to the office of Board Alternate Trustee for a two year term.

Cooperation with Treatment Facilities Committee Chair. No candidates.

New Business

Susan L. proposed a recycle plan for Central Office. Susan made a motion to have Central Office enter into a three year contract with a local recycling disposal company at a cost of approximately $575 per year. A discussion was held concerning the motion, and it was determined that the CO Representatives would take this matter back to their Groups for further discussion and determination. The motion was tabled.

No further business. Adjourn and close with the Serenity Prayer.

I made this joke up....

What are the two scariest words to an AA?
