My First PRAASA: Reno or Bust

My journey to the Pacific Region Alcoholics Anonymous Service Assembly (PRAASA) commenced with irritation and foul language under my breath as the rental car dealership explained their inventory did not include the vehicle I had reserved. With misgiving, I accepted their offer to give me a free upgrade to a four wheel drive luxury vehicle, deciding I may as well make the best of what I perceived to be a bad situation. I was on the Interstate shortly thereafter, bound for Reno, Nevada. West of Wendover, at the base of Pequop Pass, I encountered what I had been warned about prior to my departure: the worst snowstorm of the season. I planted the wheels of my rental car squarely into the treads formed by the semi in front of me and found myself traversing the terrain with relative ease, comparable to the two wheel drive vehicles sliding all over the road. It was at that moment I realized my higher power--once again--knows what is best for me better than I do. Had the rental car company produced the vehicle I had reserved, I would not be safely--albeit slowly--travelling in a four wheel drive. All I could do was smile to myself.

Upon arriving at the Casino in which PRAASA was held, I proceeded to the registration desk where I was greeted by the pleasant faces of the many friends I've made in general service. I immediately felt right at

JOKE OF THE MONTH

There's an Air Force guy driving from McChord to Ft Lewis, and an Army guy driving from Ft Lewis to McChord. In the middle of the night with no other cars on the road they hit each other head on and both cars go flying off in different directions. The Air Force guy manages to climb out of his car and surveys the damage. He looks at his twisted car and says, "Man, I am really lucky to be alive!" Likewise the Army guy scrambles out of his car and looks at his wreckage. He too says to himself, "I can't believe I survived this wreck!" The Army guy walks over to the Air Force guy and says, "Hey man, I think this is a sign from God that we should put away our petty differences and live as friends instead of archrivals" The Air Force guy thinks for a moment and says, "You know, you're absolutely right! We should be friends. Now I'm gonna see what else survived this wreck" So the Air Force guy pops open his trunk and finds a full, unopened bottle of Jack Daniels. He says to the Army guy, "I think this is another sign from God that we should toast to our new found understanding and friendship" The Army guy replies, "You're damn right!" and he grabs the bottle and starts sucking down Jack Daniels. After putting away nearly half the bottle the Army guy hands it back to the Air Force guy and says, "Your turn!" The Air Force guy twists the cap back on the bottle and says, "Nahh, I think I'll wait for the cops to come."

First, I am happy to let you know of the reopening of the Lone Peak Facility at the Utah State Prison. This facility closed over a year and a half ago due to a lower population and funding. It is up and running again and almost to full capacity. With the help of Bart R., district 10 corrections standing chair, we are meeting each Wednesday evening at 7 PM, with more meetings to be added as soon as we can enlist volunteers. The group was previously known as The Life Elevated Group, but the members have decided to rename it as all the members are new as well. They have decided to take the name of "The Golden Keys of Lone Peak", in reference to the original group formed at the old prison on 21st So and 13th East back in 1946, which was The Golden Keys Chapter. Nice tradition.

International Women's Conference: in Review

One of the ways I grow in recovery is by attending conferences, which I did this February when I participated in the International Women's Conference in Phoenix, Arizona. It was very empowering to be with 3,600 women in sobriety count down and connect with each other through our experiences. The workshops and speakers were amazing, and going with a close friend wasn't necessary as we all felt close and connected. Although it wasn't possible to attend all the workshops offered, it was nice to connect with others at the end of the day and share our favorite messages which we called WIH or "What I Heard". With so many women, there is a lot to do and so much wisdom to absorb. The optional banquet was paired with powerful speakers who delivered inspiring messages in the spirit of our primary purpose. The meeting continues at the dinner table. This is an experience you must not miss.

AA BEHIND BARS: A PERSONAL STORY OF ADDICTION & HOPE

My story is like most of the people I see in these rooms. The only difference from us and the normal A.A. rooms is that we are currently incarcerated.

I started my road to this place 40 yrs ago. I was being abused physically by my step-father, so at 8 I tried to kill myself with alcohol. I drank 2 fifths of Irish whiskey straight in 10 minutes. They had to pump my stomach and put me in the shower and pour coffee down my throat for like 20 hrs. straight. I woke up a couple of days later and told my mother that no I hadn't drank the night before (not knowing what had happened).

After that I was a pretty good kid but still had an addictive personality so by 16 I was introduced to marijuana, amphetamines, and cocaine. For the next 12 yrs, I used cocaine daily mostly. I got married and had a lovely daughter and got divorced. Got into trouble with the law and yet had a career as an automotive mechanic. My mother died of alcohol in 1996 and my grandmother died in 2003.

When my mom died I went off the hook, but not so bad that I couldn't keep my life functional. I had regained a wife, had 3 boys added to my life and obtained another automotive business, this time making it through and it became very lucrative. Yet, something was always missing and I always had to toy with the wild side. So, just like my first marriage, I was living a double life, one where I could work and be a good dad. Yet, the other a game playing methamphetamine addict.

I could get up at 5 am, get the kids ready for school, take them to the sitters or the day care and go to my shop, meet my wife at the bar she worked at for lunch, go pick the kids up from school, take them back to daycare and go back to work till midnight or 2 am, which gave me enough time to do drugs and fix cars. Being ADHD like I am, the meth or coke would let me focus, and I could work, yet I would isolate after hours at the shop.

When my grandmother died I lost all ability to control my wanting to not feel anything and I isolated totally. Hence, I needed more drugs. What better way than to make them and what better spot to cover the process up than an auto shop. (Not my brightest move!)

Well needless to say it didn't go well from there. In the next 2 yrs I was getting divorced, on my way to state prison, and running a muck. Then some friends stepped in to help me. The Feds!! They sent me to federal prison, Victorville, and a few others, and I was there for a long time. 9 yrs straight.

But I started doing A.A. there, and started really getting the message again that I had forgotten so long ago. That I am not alone and I can't do this alone.

Well, I went back and forth in and out and got terminated from the feds, and thought I would be good, all I had to do was not do crime. I could use, just not do crime. (That worked well, let me tell you!) One feeds the other.

It took a while but it brought me back to prison. But, really it's a blessing in disguise cuz since being here I have decided to give 110% to the program of A.A. and into a program I would like to call, save James. The reason I would like to call it that is because for the first time in my 49 yrs of life I am totally doing something because it's what I want to do. I know that my life is so much better today than it has been in the past and it's because of A.A. and the friendships with the people that care about me. And my higher power and most of all myself.

I hope to have the people that I care most about in my life back in my life one day from showing them the man I am because of A.A. So with that I will take another 24!

-James M

My Alcoholism is a Thinking Disease!!

What!??...

That statement stood out to me at a meeting I was attending. A sponsor from the outside world came and said we need to live from our heart not our head. It all started to make sense. All of my life I've wanted to situate life my way. People, places and things. Always pointing out the flaws in others and in life in general. Failing to see how much of a mess my life was. How insane is that? I now have more peace of mind allowing others to be as they are knowing we are all god's children. Anyways it's not my job to be god. I'm but a servant, and if I feel prompted to be of service then thy will be done! I'm now learning we give what we get from life so I wish everyone Happiness, Love and good Fortune. God bless All - Thank you

-Jeremy M.

Letter to the Lifeline:

What you do is try to quit drinking. You keep practicing but without support, excuses turn into severe consequences. Young men and women who have people that love them, go away for too long, loose what loved them and what they loved. The amount of people who talk to you, who care about you, slim and far between. Disappear into a system with others dealing with the dark reality of addiction and excess.

I question why I didn't have the agency to reach out for support like what you can find with the A.A. fellowship. The Idea that like minded people can help each other stay strong. Types of forces working against us are powerful and mean. Continuing to keep us contemplating the hating of ourselves with insane negative addictions. Leading us away from satisfaction and peace in our lives.

You can't listen to a higher power's guidance or feel what's really important when you're drunk. What makes sense is having friends, like-minded people, sponsors and staying strong in Alcoholics Anonymous.

-Matthew J.

...home. As a relatively young man in Alcoholics Anonymous, I was delighted to see a respectable amount of other young people invested in the service structure of our fellowship because it gives me hope for the future. That evening, I attended the first of two round table discussions on both cooperation with the professional community and young people in AA where I gleaned new suggestions on how to better carry the message to our professionals and youth. Debate and disagreement are the essence of round table discussions so that competing and converging ideas yield the best pathway forward, which is ultimately in God's hands. Once the business of AA had wrapped up, with Rule 62 foremost in my thoughts, it was time to hit the blackjack table before retiring for the evening. Reno or bust, indeed.

Saturday's panel discussions and open mic time slots were the highlight of my first PRAASA experience because the general service structure of Alcoholics Anonymous does not evade controversy or new perspectives, but instead directly confronts them. For instance, I was until this point unaware of a growing number of alcoholics who have lobbied for a pamphlet aimed at our atheist and agnostic members so as to ensure they are not dissuaded on the program based on its frequent use of the word "God". Perhaps the most emotionally fulfilling moment of open mic time was when a young Navajo woman tearfully expressed her joy and appreciation for the Twelve Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous being played to all of us in her native tongue. I was hard-pressed to find a dry eye throughout the assembly hall.

Now, a word on the contentious issue with which I was faced. To my dismay, but not to my surprise considering the geographic area in which our region is located, I discovered a serious effort to offer "alternative versions" of the first 164 pages of our basic text because--according to some--it is not progressive or forward-thinking in its content. The argument was that if a young newcomer picked up a Big Book, he or she might take offense if said person is a woman, homosexual, employer, or any other number of minority groups. After listening to what I determined were nonsensical arguments, I felt inspired to approach the microphone so that I might share my own experience and thoughts on the subject. Unfortunately, our time was cut directly after the person next in line from me concluded her thoughts. So, I will share with you--the local reader--what I intended to say at PRAASA because my feelings have not changed in the slightest. I don't believe in tribalism. In other words, I don't believe in separating us into different "types" of alcoholics. We are not straight alcoholics, gay alcoholics, white alcoholics, black alcoholics, male alcoholics, or female alcoholics; We are all alcoholics. We have suffered the same affliction, and we seek the exact same solution. As a so-called young person in AA, I can tell you with conviction the information contained in the first 164 pages of our book got me sober, as it has done for millions of others. So, I have no desire to change the Big Book or offer alternate versions because the Big Book changed me. I left PRAASA with a burning passion to carry the message of our program, as it currently stands, to as many alcoholics who are ready to listen.

Yours in Service,

Shilo P, GSR of the South Enders
Group

Karl To a recovered thinker

The man sits on a corner table
by the front glass window of the coffee house.
He reads, sips his coffee, pause and looks outside.
The man has white hair, a black jacket
and a peaceful appearance.
The man stops reading his book
and he thinks about existence and life.
"There are no victims in this life, only volunteers."
"I am not who I think I am; I am not who you think I am.
Who I really am is that man I see in the mirror when I am alone.
"My problem is my thinking, drinking alcohol is my solution."
He remains at the corner table of the cafe.
Nevertheless, no ones see him; he died last night.
Only I see him because I am with him or perhaps, I am like him.
No one would ever know, because I am not who you think I am.
Outside the cafe the trees are covered with white flowers blossom

God is Everything or God is nothing

Can I be the wind that touches my face?
Can I be the one who gives me grace?
Could I be that rock which sits there in form?
Maybe in the next life, if I were reborn.
I had no eyes to witness, how could I see?
The millions of particles which existed as me.
Should I pray to the heavens, oceans or seas?
Shelled in a power greater than me.
The smaller I get the simpler it can be.
God is either everything or nothing I see.
When you believe that you know something at all,
That is when you continue to fall.
And when I can say,
I don't know!
God becomes everything or nothing at all.

The Alcoholic Man

To my childhood friend Miguel's father.

I only know why I drink.
Said the man and swallowed
the bitter and sweet blood of the grapevine.

I only know why I drink.
Said the man and his trembling hand
held the glass of red wine.

I only know why I drink.
Said the man in his death-bed
extending his deformed hands
by hard work, cement and stones.

Give me another glass of wine doctor.
Don't you see that life is worse nothing to me.
I do not need anything from you or anyone.
Only death can alleviate my addiction.

I only know why I drink.
Said the man for the last time,
and became silent forever.
