Notes on Step Seven

There was true humility and deep surrender by asking God to "take all of me," both the "good" and the "bad." This was an admission that I could not trust myself to differentiate between the two. I almost drank after five months sobriety before going into the 12-step process with my sponsor. He wisely pointed out the obvious fact that my mind lied to me—It was not to be trusted!! I needed a higher power (God) to see the truth about myself. What an ego-shattering revelation! Yet, it was necessary to give up on myself and trust God to take over my recovery. Someone said: "Self cannot rid self of self with self."

I often hear long dissertations of what Bill W meant by "shortcomings" and "defects of character" in Step Seven. Though it may be impossible to overstate the importance of dictionaries, Bill W uses these words to mean the same thing. Let us look how he came about phrasing Steps Six and Seven:

Page 59, Step Seven: "Humbly asked Him to remove our "shortcomings."

Page 76, Step Seven: "I pray that you now remove from me every "defect of character" that stands in the way of my usefulness to you and my fellows." Consequently, it is easy to see that Bill meant for us to absorb these two words as "twins."

I wondered why the closing word "Amen" was not used in the many prayers of the steps leading up to Step Seven. It was explained to me that this word can be used as a summary of previous connected facts, e.g.:

In Step Three we asked to be relieved of the bondage of self, but we didn't know what that was. Not complete. No Amen!

In Step Four we only partially realize the nature of said bondage. Not complete. No amen!

In Step Five our sponsor may provide deeper insights of the bondage. Not

Pamphlet of the Month

Gradually, as time went on, I came to believe that there is something within me that guides me through life and looks after me I don't know who or what it is, but i'm convinced there is "something." Sometimes I call it "God" simply because it's one syllable and it slips off the tongue easily. I still consider myself an agnostic, though.

The first three words of Step Two are "came to believe." Those three words tell me that it is a gradual process. I haven't seen a big flash of light and been instantly transformed, but many little things have happened in my life to convince me that "something" exists.

& that works for me! (Neil's Story excerpt)

Joke of the Month

A Canadian is on vacation and walks into a bar. He sits on this HUGE stool and says to the bartender 'man, I heard things are big down here in Texas, but this is ridiculas!' and orders a mug of beer. He gets a pitcher of beer and asks the bartender, 'man, I heard that things are big down here in Texas but this is ridiculas!' and goes about drinking his beer. He orders another and he gets really pissed drunk.

Well, not too long later, he has to go to the bathroom really, really bad so he asks the bartender, 'Where is your washroom???' The bartender says, down the hall, second door on the right.' So the man climbs off the stool and stumbles down the hall and enters the second door to the left and falls in this huge swimming pool. The man is struggling to stay afloat and screams 'DON'T FLUSH IT!!

Message from lifeline Editor

For a month now, I missed my daily meetings at my home group of misfit toys. When I went yesterday, my friend at group said he was sure I was dead.

Not dead.

For the first time I feel alive. I am working on myself. As an empath and highly sensitive person, I need time for me. I believe many of us former alcoholics need to learn to let go of our ego self. With me, I always thought everyone was better than me.

I needed to take a pause and learn who I was in regard to everyone else. Learn that I can say 'No' and have the control inside me to break through my former muteness and instead of showing up at almost every rally at our state capitol, I instead scanned my body every day and listened to what myself had to say to me.

Being an alcoholic and addict, I was clearly avoiding experiencing my feelings that were stored in my body and making me physically sick. I slept for 17 hours a day.

In order not to relapse, I had to turn inward. To forgive me and my perceived antagonist in my life. To learn I too had started to hurt others because I hurt so much inside.

Every day is still a struggle for me. I have to be on some serious medications for my diagnosis of addiction, chronic fatigue and bipolar 2. I attend therapy once a week. Group therapy four times a week and have sessions with my case manager.

Sometimes it takes hours to get out of bed, while other days I act like I swallowed a bottle of adderal.

I learned by watching each and everyone deal with my adoptive brother's suicide. That I would never take my life for any reason. Luckily, I no longer even have the desire to die.

I learned self-care is not selfish. It is beautiful. I feel empowered and have a quest for life again.

I'm dealing with my demons head on and sober. Yes, Recently, I was having a mid-life crisis, suffering the loss of a 14-year old dog. Two years later, I heard my new puppy get hit while he died in my arms. My husband wanted a divorce for good reason. And I was at the lowest point thus far in my life.

I missed my brother, Will, more than words could say. I felt all alone without his understanding and compassion to listen to everything I said. He was my best friend and was always there for me.

Until he wasn't.

With these losses, I learned I needed to give myself solo time to grieve and deal. I had to go within. Where, I found true freedom by loving myself as much as I loved anyone else, becoming my own best friend.

We are all beautiful souls on the tough journey of learning how to be sober, no matter how long it takes us. If we're trying, we will be blessed.

Notes on Step Seven ...cont from pg. 1

complete. No Amen!

In Step Six we become willing to ask God to remove this bondage. Not complete. No Amen!

In Step Seven, not that we have a much better insight of our bondage and are willing to be rid of our defects and shortcomings we are now ready to ask God for help. We have completed the necessary prerequisites. The summary has been completed—consequently Bill adds the word, Amen.

So be it.

-Bob S.

The A.A. Literature Committee welcomes new submissions for the new Fifth Edition of the Big Book.

It is our hope that any new stories from our current membership will help future alcoholics to identify and find recovery in the pages of a Fifth edition.
